About Time Management for Interactors: Balancing Service and Studies.

Introduction:

The Interact Club of New Capital College successfully hosted a virtual program titled "Time Management for Interactors: Balancing Service and Studies" on Monday, September 21, 2026. Conducted via Google Meet starting at 8:30 P.M., the free online session was organized to help young student leaders navigate the demands of academic responsibilities alongside active community service. Presidents and secretaries across clubs mobilized members to join the interactive platform for valuable guidance. Ultimately, the engaging virtual gathering provided practical time-management strategies tailored specifically for dedicated Interactors.

Project Summary:

The virtual program "Time Management for Interactors: Balancing Service and Studies," organized by the Interact Club of New Capital College on September 21, 2026, successfully empowered student leaders with essential organizational skills. Conducted seamlessly via Google Meet, the evening session drew active participation from members eager to learn effective methods for prioritizing coursework and club commitments. Through structured discussions and practical tips, attendees explored how to maintain high academic performance while driving impactful community service initiatives. The free webinar fostered a collaborative environment where youth shared personal scheduling challenges and solutions. Overall, the timely online event equipped participants with the confidence and structure needed to excel both in the classroom and in their leadership roles.
