About 'Zero to Hero: Budget Sprint'

Introduction

Zero to Hero: Budget Sprint was organized based on the monthly theme to help members understand the importance of smart budgeting and financial plannings. The event focused on how and proper resources, good management and creativity can make events successful without unnecessary expenses . Through an interactive session and a budget proposal challenge , participants got the opportunity to put their ideas into practice, work collaboratively, and learn the value of making the most out of a limited budget.

Summary

The session began with an informative presentation delivered by two presenters from Interact Club of Annapurna H.S School, and Interact Club of Shikshantar School. The presentation covered the basics of budgeting and financial planning, including managing expenses, reducing unnecessary costs, making the best use of available resources, and planning events within a fixed budget. It helped participants understand how proper financial planning and effective use of resources contribute to the successful planning and execution of events.

Following the presentation, participants were given 30 minutes to prepare a budget proposal for an event of their choice within the given budget of 5k also implying the guidance they got during the budget management session. They came up with various ideas, including cybersecurity sessions, pad-making using safe and available resources, Olympiads, and other initiatives.The activity allowed participants to showcase their creativity, and understanding of how to plan and manage a budget.

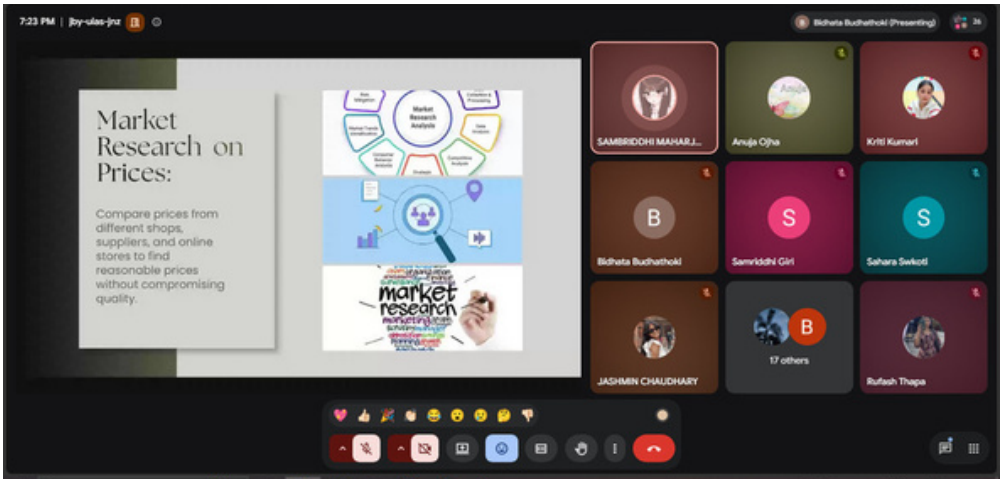

Each participant then presented their proposal within 6 minutes before a judging panel consisting of representatives from the collaborating clubs. The judge panel also asked question regarding their proposal while pointing out several missing details in their proposal while guiding the participants on how to improve them. After evaluating the ideas based on feasibility, budget planning, and resource management, Itr. Prabesh Acharya's pad-making event was selected as the winning proposal.

The session aimed to promote financial awareness and responsible budgeting, highlighting the importance of proper planning and wise use of resources. The winning idea will be taken forward for further coordination and implementation through a joint effort by all five collaborating clubs. Overall, the event provided a valuable learning experience on financial planning and decision-making while organizing community initiatives.
