About "Threads of Two Traditions"

Introduction:

As part of World Interact Week 2026, the Interact Club of Little Angels' School organized "Threads of Two Traditions," a cultural exchange session with the Interact Club of Richmond College, Sri Lanka. The event brought together four representatives from each club to share and explore their respective cultures, traditions, festivals, historical backgrounds, and heritage. It aimed to promote cultural understanding, celebrate diversity, and build international friendships by providing members with an opportunity to learn about each other's countries, discuss historical landmarks, and exchange invitations to visit Nepal and Sri Lanka.

Project Summary:

The celebration of "Threads of Two Traditions" brought together members of the Interact Club of Little Angels' School and the Interact Club of Richmond College, Sri Lanka, for a meaningful cultural exchange as part of World Interact Week 2026. The event aimed to create connections between young Interactors from two different countries while providing an opportunity to explore each other's cultures, traditions, history, and heritage. It served as a platform for members to share their cultural identities, appreciate their differences, and discover the similarities that bring people together despite geographical boundaries.

Threads of Two Traditions

The session featured four representatives from each club who actively participated in the cultural exchange. Members from both sides shared insights into their respective countries, discussing traditional practices, festivals, food, clothing, languages, historical backgrounds, and cultural values. The representatives from Nepal introduced the rich cultural heritage of their country, while the members from Sri Lanka shared the unique traditions and customs that shape their national identity. The conversations also highlighted important historical places, cultural landmarks, and traditions that hold special significance in both countries.

Beyond sharing information, the session encouraged open conversations and meaningful interactions between the participants. Members showed genuine interest in learning about each other's lifestyles, traditions, and experiences. One of the most interesting parts of the exchange was the discussion about historical and tourist destinations, where participants introduced places they believed everyone should visit. The conversation also led to friendly invitations to visit each other's countries, creating excitement about the possibility of experiencing these cultures beyond a virtual meeting.

Overall, "Threads of Two Traditions" was more than just a cultural presentation. It was an opportunity to build international friendships, encourage cultural understanding, and strengthen the connection between the two Interact clubs. The event reminded everyone that culture is not simply about traditions or history, but also about the stories, values, and experiences that shape our identities. By bringing together young Interactors from Nepal and Sri Lanka, the exchange successfully celebrated diversity, promoted international understanding, and created meaningful connections that extended beyond borders.
