About 'Diversity Day'

Introduction:

Echoes of Tradition was organized as part of Interact Week on the occasion of Tihar, with the aim of celebrating Nepalese cultural heritage, promoting cultural awareness, and encouraging students to appreciate their traditions. In collaboration with the school administration, the event encouraged students and teachers to come dressed in their traditional cultural attire. Activities such as Desi Bhailo and Rangoli were also organized to bring the festive spirit of Tihar into the school environment and provide everyone with an opportunity to participate in and experience the richness of our cultural traditions.

Project Summary:

Echoes of Tradition was an event organized under Interact Week on the occasion of Tihar. The event began with students and teachers arriving at school dressed in their traditional cultural attire, creating a festive atmosphere throughout the school. Interactors were given the opportunity to witness various cultural performances that reflected the spirit and significance of Tihar. A Rangoli-making activity was also organized, allowing participants to showcase their creativity through colourful traditional designs. The activities provided everyone with an opportunity to experience, appreciate, and celebrate Nepalese cultural heritage.

Conclusion:

Overall, Echoes of Tradition successfully brought the school community together to celebrate the spirit of Tihar and appreciate Nepalese cultural heritage. The event provided an opportunity for students to experience traditional performances, explore their creativity through Rangoli making, and develop a deeper appreciation for their cultural roots. It also highlighted the importance of preserving our traditions and passing them on to future generations.
